ADM. DEWEY'S SWORD.

The Jeweled Weapon Voted to the Admiral by Congress Presented to Him.

The Hero of Manila's Trip From New York City to the Capital of the Nation.

His Reception in Washington One That an Emperor Might Envy—The City Daily Decorated—Adm. Dewey Receives Much Attention.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The homecoming of Adm. George Dewey—for henceforth the national capital is to be his home—was made the occasion for the greatest tribute ever paid by Washington to any individual. After the preliminary welcome in New York, itself unsurpassed in its kind, it remained for the highest and greatest in the official world to hold out the hand of greeting to the famous admiral, and to join with the people who are to be his fellow citizens in bidding him welcome.

On the facade of the newly completed government post office building flamed forth two inscriptions set in electric points, the one reciting the famous message of the president directing Dewey, 10,000 miles away in the far east, to go forth to destroy the Spanish fleet, and the other setting out the famous admiral's direction to the lamented Gridley. "You may first when you are ready, Gridley," which marked an epoch in the history of the United States. Twelve thousand members of civic organizations paraded before him, besides tens of thousands of non-organized citizens, and in a roar of cannon rockets and the blaze of red fire and the thunderous cheering of the populace, and the warm greeting of the head of the nation, Dewey came to the national capital to a welcome such as has not been known here hitherto.

His journey here from New York had been one continuous ovation, limited in its intensity only by the density of population. The decorated special train which left the Pennsylvania railroad ferry slip in Jersey City at 1:50 in the afternoon was fully in keeping with its distinguished passenger. It was made up of five cars, the Pennsylvania's prize special, the Atlanta, a dining car, a combination smoker and three parlor cars for the accommodation of the Washington reception committee.

It was said by the railroad officials and trainmen that the ovation during the run from New York to Washington was the most remarkable demonstration that has ever taken place along its full population, and every house and crossroad settlement was turned inside out to see the flying special pass.

A bare stop was made at Princeton, where young Dewey had been a student, and the admiral went to the platform for a minute, merely saying to the boys that he was pleased with the reception they had given him. It was such a reception as an emperor might have envied, every student of the college town being in evidence as well as the whole population of the place, while college yells sounded above the rumble of the departing train.

The train, as it reached the line of the District of Columbia, stopped for a few minutes at the little station of Deanwood, while the reception committee went through the formality of presenting the nation's guest the freedom of the district.

John Addison Porter, secretary to the president, first extended President McKinley's greeting, to which the admiral returned his thanks very briefly. Commissioner Wight then said:

"Adm. Dewey, you are now in the District of Columbia, and representing the commissioners of the district, I have the honor of tendering you the freedom of the nation's capital, and in behalf of the people of the district, from the most exalted to the humblest citizen, I give you a sincere and cordial welcome home. We feel gratified that Washington is to be your future home. It is the best place in the world in which to have a home, and it is fitting that you who have done so much for the nation and have done such an important part for the nation should make your future home in the nation's capital. The people of Washington will esteem it, not only a pleasure, but an honor to do all in their power to make your stay with us as pleasant as your services have been successful at Manila."

Adm. Dewey's reply was as brief and characteristic as all of his other speeches have been.

"I want to thank you very much, my friends," said he, "for this testimonial of your regard. It is true that as long as I live, and I hope to live a long time (cheers) I intend to live in Washington. I thank you again for this expression."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The culmination of Adm. Dewey's triumphal home coming was reached Tuesday in the shadow of the dome of the national capitol. Here he received from the hands of the president the magnificent jeweled sword voted him by congress in commemoration of the victory at Manila bay. This was the official reason for the ceremony. But more official sanction could never have thrown into the demonstration the fervor of enthusiasm that was meted out to the admiral as he appeared before the vast audience, composed not only of all the highest officials in the land, but of spectators drawn from every quarter of the United States. The battle of Manila bay was not forgotten, but it might be said to have been relegated almost to second place in the desire to do honor to the man who had proved himself as great after victory as before it, and who had shown in the long and trying months that followed his naval triumph the qualities of a statesman and a wise administrator, as well as those of the fighting leader of a victorious fleet.

And enhancing these qualities was that of manly modesty, displayed in the quiet dignity with which he met the occasion. This trait of Dewey's character was evidenced from the moment he reached the stand side by side with the president. He paused at this point for a moment unwilling, apparently, to take the place that had been prepared for him on the right of the platform lest he should appear to usurp the place due to the chief magistrate. President McKinley grasped the situation in an instant, and taking his great sea captain by the arm, placed him by gentle force in that chair that had been intended for him. Later in the day, as the carriages bearing the official party drove away from the capitol, between walls of cheering people, the president again displayed his tact by remaining covered and ignoring the demonstration himself, leaving its acknowledgments to the admiral alone.

For Dewey it was a trying as well as a triumphal day. It has been given to few officers in the naval history of the country to sit before a crowd of thousands while the chief of the naval establishments dilated upon their exploits, and then to stand before the same crowd to receive at the hands of the president a sword prepared for him at the behalf of the representatives of the whole people. The strain upon Adm. Dewey reached almost to the breaking point. None but those nearest to him could see how he labored to repress his feelings during the address of Secretary Long, but when he arose to receive the sword from the hands of the president no one could mistake the flash of the white gloved hand as it rose to dash away the tears before the admiral came to the rigid attitude of attention before his chief.

When it became Dewey's turn to reply his voice failed him and he made the effort twice before his lips would respond. When he did succeed his tones were clear and steady, but so low that only those nearest him could hear.

One of the most remarkable features of the eventful day was the ovation to Rr. Adm. Schley on the return of the party from the capitol to the white house. His carriage was several numbers behind that of the president and Adm. Dewey and received an ovation that could be scarcely ranked below that accorded to the admiral himself. The tumult grew as the carriage proceeded down the avenue and the crowd surged around it till the horses were brought to a footpace. Finally a company of the high school cadets came to the rescue and formed about the carriage in a hollow square. Thus protected and flanked by a force of police the carriage reached the white house with a long gap between it and the next official guests.

Out of the store of his experience the president was able to give Adm. Dewey one valuable suggestion before leaving the capitol. The venerable Cardinal Gibbons was presented, and after an exchange of greetings the president asked the admiral if he felt equal to a general ordeal of handshaking. The hero of Manila swerved from the shock, explaining that his right arm was partially paralyzed from his experience in New York.

"Let me suggest to you," said the president, "hereafter you shake the other man's hand, don't let him shake yours. You save yourself by not letting them get the grasp on you."

The sword, except its steel blade and the body metal of its scabbard, is entirely of 22 carat gold. On the pommel is carved the name of the battleship Olympia, which was Dewey's flagship at Manila, and the Zodiacal sign for December, in which lucky month Dewey was born. Circling these is a closely woven wreath of oak leaves, long employed to indicate and adorn rank.

The sword box is of white oak inlaid with black velvet, and at the center of the cover a gold shield surmounted by an eagle and inscribed with a single star and the words, "Rr. Adm. George Dewey, U. S. N."

He Died in Poverty.

DUNQUE, Ia., Oct. 5.—Theopont Muller, a member of a noble and distinguished family in Prussia, died Wednesday. He served in the revolutionary army in 1848 under Sigel and fled to this country to avoid arrest. He was well educated speaking several languages. He was 79 years of age. His last years have been spent in extreme poverty.

Confirmation has been received of the report of the arrest, upon the application of the United States legation, of Fred T. Moore, the fugitive assistant teller of the National Bank of Commerce, of Boston, Mass.

REOCCUPYPORAC

The Town Was Captured by Gen. MacArthur and Evacuated Next Day.

Insurgents Made Two Attacks on Calamba—Sixty Filipinos Reported Killed—American Loss Two Killed, Seven Wounded—Urdaneta Recovered.

MANILA, Oct. 5.—Several hundred insurgents have reoccupied Porac, which was captured by Gen. MacArthur on September 18 and evacuated by the Americans the following day.

The insurgent forces are also reported moving toward Mexico, southeast of Angeles.

The object of the double movement, is, apparently, to get behind the American garrison on both sides of the Manila-Dagupan railway.

Reconnoissances from Mexico by the 4th cavalry toward Santa Ana, north-east of Mexico and toward Arayat, due north of Santa Ana, developed the fact that the insurgents are in position at both points.

An American private was killed in the skirmish at Santa Ana.

The Arayat party learned that Scott and Edwards, of the 25th infantry, who are missing, are prisoners at Magalaya.

The insurgents Tuesday made two attacks on Calamba, in which the commanding officer reports that 60 Filipinos were killed and many wounded.

Two companies of the 21st regiment repelled each attack, losing two men killed and seven wounded.

Bolomen surprised an American outpost near Guagua, killing two privates. The other two escaped.

While four sailors of the United States cruiser Baltimore were entering the Hacoer river in a boat Tuesday after the fight, they received a volley wounding three. It is understood that the volley came from United States soldiers, who having been ordered to prevent the passing of boats, fired by mistake upon the Baltimore's men.

Rr. Adm. Watson announced the recovery of the United States gunboat Urdaneta, which was captured and beached by the insurgents near Orani, on the Orani river, where she had been blockading.

The expedition was entirely successful, and the Americans suffered no casualties.

MANILA, Oct. 5.—An attack upon Parangue was made by the insurgents Wednesday night, and rebel sympathizers in the town set fire to a number of buildings. Col. Daggett repulsed the attack and declined offers of assistance from Bacoor.

The extent of the damage done by the incendiary fires has not yet been learned.

Imus, Luzon, Oct. 5.—The statement that Maj. Price asked Adm. Watson to send the gunboats to his support in the recent engagement of Imus is correct.

Gen. Lawton Tuesday deposed the insurgents, driving them westward. The purpose of the rebels was to cut the communication maintained between Bacoor and Imus by means of the road between those places at a point between Imus and the east bank of the river. The insurgents had trenches along the west bank commanding the open spaces. A force of 1,500 rebels attacked Imus Monday and 600 proceeded against Bacoor with detachments along the river.

Tuesday morning Col. Daggett's force spread along the road from Bacoor toward Imus, and three companies of the 4th regiment under Capt. Hollis were thrown out from Imus, the two commands forming a junction. The entire line crossed the river and drove the Filipinos from their trenches to the westward, through rice fields and thickets.

The marines, whose services were tendered by Adm. Watson, crossed the river near the bay, forming a part of the line of advance. Before the forward movement was begun the American artillery shelled the enemy's position. The only American casualty was the wounding of a lieutenant of artillery. Several wounded Filipinos were attended by Surgeon Maj. Penrose and members of the ambulance corps.

A number of prisoners were taken. Gen. Lawton while riding up the road to Imus was the target for many shots.

Trouble Among Miners.

DECATUR, Ill., Oct. 5.—A crowd of 200 striking miners gathered at the new shaft here Wednesday morning to prevent non union miners from entering the shaft. This they were successful in doing, but only after they had assaulted four Negroes and two white miners, who were on their way to work in the mine. The police rescued the non union miners and took them to police headquarters for protection, but did not make any arrests.

Adm. Dewey the Guest of Mrs. McLean.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Adm. Dewey was the guest of Mrs. Washington McLean at dinner Wednesday night, the admiral driving out to her country residence, "Deauvoir," shortly after 7 o'clock. The rest of the evening was without incident.

Athens Selected.

AKRON, O., Oct. 5.—Athens was selected by the Ohio Woman's Suffrage association as the place for holding the next convention. The date has not been fixed.

No Canadian Troops for South Africa.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 5.—Premier Laurier stated Wednesday positively that so far no offer had been made by Canada to send troops to South Africa.

ORDERED TO MANILA.

The Cruiser Brooklyn, Gunboats Marietta and Machias and Other Vessels to Be Sent to the Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The President Wednesday directed the immediate dispatch to the Philippines of a number of vessels of the navy including the cruiser Brooklyn and gunboats Marietta and Machias. The action is the result of Adm. Dewey's interview Wednesday in which he went over the Philippine situation with the president.

The orders given are in line with the expressed determination of the president to furnish the army and navy every resource for stamping out the Philippine insurrection at the earliest possible time. At Adm. Dewey's extended interview with the president Wednesday the former went into the Philippine situation at great length, explaining carefully the existing condition of affairs and his views of the outlook, concluding with an earnest recommendation that the Brooklyn and some other vessels be sent on to the Philippines. This reinforcement of the present fleet of the Asiatic squadron he urged as necessary and said their dispatch should be directed as early as possible. The president immediately communicated with the navy department and instructed the secretary of the navy to issue an order carrying out the admiral's recommendation and to see that they be got in readiness at once. The Marietta and Machias, besides the Brooklyn, will be designated by the navy department along with several other vessels which have not yet been selected.

FOR SAFE-KEEPING.

Adm. Dewey Placed His Magnificent Sword in the Vault of the Superintendent of the Navy Building.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—One purpose when induced the visit of Adm. Dewey to the navy department Wednesday was to arrange for the safekeeping of the magnificent sword presented to him Tuesday. Following him to the navy department was his Chinese servant, Ah Soong, bearing the sword in its oaken casket. The admiral carried this into the room of the superintendent of the building, Commodore Baird, his old personal friend, and the latter placed the gift in his big safe.

The detaching of Adm. Dewey from the Olympia had the effect of detaching Lieut. Brumby, his flag lieutenant, and Lieut. Caldwell, the admiral's secretary, from the duties they have heretofore performed for him. An order was issued, however, directing these officers to report to the admiral in connection with his shore duties. This is only temporary, to allow the admiral to catch up with the mass of correspondence, and is not the assignment of a permanent staff such as that Adm. Porter had.

An Aeronaut Killed.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 5.—Marza Townsend, of Decorah, Ia., about 20 years old, was killed on the carnival circus grounds about 5 o'clock Wednesday evening while attempting a parachute leap. He was fired from a wooden cannon while up 1,000 feet in the air. The parachute failed to open and he fell to the earth like a stone, and was picked up dead and terribly mangled. A large crowd saw the terrible accident.

The 35th Regiment Sails for Manila.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 5.—The transports Rio De Janeiro and Sikh sailed for Manila Wednesday evening with the 35th regiment United States volunteers on board. In addition to the regiment there were on board 21 trained nurses and 60 casuals, who will be assigned to companies when they reach Manila.

Adm. Howison Lowers His Flag.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Adm. Howison reported to the navy department that he lowered his flag Tuesday on board the Chicago, now at New York, and thus closed his service as commander of the South Atlantic station. The final orders placing Adm. Schley in command of this squadron have not yet been issued.

En Route to Chicago.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 5.—The handsome special train bearing Minister Mariscal, vice president of Mexico, and his party, arrived here Wednesday afternoon from Eagle Pass, which place they had left shortly before 11 o'clock Wednesday morning. There were nearly 2,000 people at the depot to greet the distinguished party.

Big Deal in Copper Property.

TUCSON, A. T., Oct. 5.—Another big deal of copper property was effected Wednesday. George H. Sisson and wife sold to The Oxide Copper Co., of New Jersey, 35 copper claims in the silver belt district for $5,000,000. It is understood the purchase is in the interest of the Standard Oil Co.

Suicided by Hanging.

LAPORTE, Ind., Oct. 5.—Christian Dunker, a wealthy Michigan City grocerman, committed suicide Wednesday morning by hanging himself. He had been in ill-health and was suffering from temporary derangement. Dunker was formerly engaged in business at Hamilton, O.

Church Burned—Fireman Injured.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 5.—The First Baptist church was destroyed by fire late Wednesday afternoon. Four firemen were injured.

WAR IS IMMINENT.

The Boers Have Left Volksrust, and Are Moving Toward the Frontier—Situation Most Critical.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—A special dispatch from Newcastle, Natal, dated Wednesday says: "The Boers have left the laager at Volksrust and are moving toward the frontier. The situation is most critical. The magistrates and municipal officers have assembled in the town hall to concoct measures for the defense of the town against an expected attack. All the women and children have been ordered to leave for the interior of Natal."

The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Cape Town, telegraphing under date of Tuesday, says:

For the first time in several months J. H. Hofmeir, the Afrikaner leader in Cape Colony, and Sir Alfred Milner, British high commissioner for South Africa and governor of Cape Colony, met Wednesday in conference. An unconfirmed report is in circulation that Mr. Hofmeir has been entrusted with an imperial mission to Pretoria.

The Daily Mail's correspondent at Lourenco Marquez reports that H. M. S. Philomel has gone to Durban for the purpose of landing 100 men and a gun.

Commenting editorially on the foregoing dispatch the Daily Mail says it considers that the action reported indicates great danger.

"The admiralty," says the Daily Mail, "would not countenance such a measure except in circumstances of unusual emergency," and it thinks it probable that other British ships are converging silently upon the theater of action.

A special dispatch from Pretoria says the Transvaal government has seized gold to the value of £800,000, which is now lodged in the state mint. The government, the dispatch adds, will indemnify the banks to which the gold is consigned.

A dispatch from Volksrust says the Boer camp on the Natal border now comprises 8,000 men and is growing daily. The commissariat arrangements, the dispatch says, are defective. One of the largest corps lay in the veldt without shelter during a heavy thunderstorm. Commandant Gen. Joubert is momentarily expected to assume command of the Boer forces.

Gen. Joubert has threatened to shoot any man who moves without orders. The London morning papers are inclined to regard the seizure of gold by the Transvaal government as an act of war. No absolute confirmation is obtained of the report that a Boer ultimatum has been presented, but the news comes from what is usually good Boer sources.

THEIR WESTERN TRIP.

The President and Mrs. McKinley and the Entire Cabinet Left Washington Wednesday Evening.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—President and Mrs. McKinley and party, including the entire cabinet, left Washington at 9 o'clock Wednesday night for a half month's trip to Chicago and the north-west. The president arrived a few moments before time for departure and, with Mrs. McKinley leaning on his arm, walked briskly down the entire length of the train shed, frequently acknowledging the salutes of a small crowd of spectators. The first stop of the party will be at Baltimore where the engine will be changed.

The train which will be the home of the distinguished party throughout the trip is one of the most sumptuous, fully equipped ever run from the Pennsylvania station. It consists of the private car Campana occupied by the president and his wife, the combination car Atlantic, the sleeper Ixon, compartment cars Chili and Omena, the last two for the use of the cabinet, all of whom were on the train except Secretary Gage who is in the west, and the diner Gilsey.

AN EJECTMENT SUIT.

It Involves the Title of Real Estate in the Heart of Bristol, Tenn., Valued at $300,000.

BRISTOL, Tenn., Oct. 5.—Samuel L. King and J. W. Owen, for the King heirs, filed an ejectment suit here Wednesday against the Norfolk & Western Railway Co. involving title to real estate in the heart of the city valued at $300,000. The land includes the sites of the Norfolk & Western, the Southern and the Virginia & Southwestern railway depots, also the right of way to five miles of track. The ground of action is that the company has violated the terms of the deed, which was conditional, thus forfeiting its right to the property involved. The land was donated to the Virginia & Tennessee Railway Co. (now the Norfolk & Western) prior to the civil war by Samuel E. Goodson and James King.

The Report Discredited.

GOLF AS A TEMPER TEST.

A Luckless Player Demonstrates How Easy It Is to Control One's Self.

A golf story which should certainly be added to the already excellent number to which the game has given birth, possesses an advantage which cannot be claimed for all of them, that of being absolutely authentic. An enthusiast, who was somewhat of a tyro at golf, though of great distinction at other forms of athletics, had a series of misfortunes with which most people can sympathize. He was playing against a man whose opinion he valued, and he consistently topped his ball, sliced it, pulled it, lifted it into a tree, played a fine caddy stroke into a bunker, and made extraordinary straight long-distance punts in which the ball hopped gently across the hole into the long grass which skirted the green.

At first the player's demeanor was ominously sweet; he seemed positively to enjoy his strokes; then he grew mad; then he grew apparently careless, though his caddy noticed the carelessness was only assumed, as he was pressing horribly. The worst of golf is that you can never deceive either your caddy or your ball. At last, at the seventh hole, he grew wonderfully calm, and marched off to the next teeing ground, remarking to his trembling caddy that he would not trouble to hole out. After an easy preliminary swing or two he topped his ball, which trickled away about 20 yards to the right. Then the man took all his clubs and broke them one by one across his knees, remarking quietly to his opponent that "it is better to break your infernal clubs than to lose your infernal temper."—London Telegraph.

COMMERCIAL WIT.

A Parcel of Penns That Were Worked Off All Right But They Didn't Take.

Four traveling men sat on the sidewalk in front of the Windsor the other night telling stories. The man who smoked stogies had just finished a somnambulist tale.

"Reminds me of what I once read," said to his fellow-prisoner, commented the man with the nasal blossom.

"What was that?" he said, "as the result of a moment of abstraction."

The pun fell with a dull, sickening thud. But the man who smoked stogies came to the front again.

"Like the incendiary, eh? There is some similarity. He was there because of his habit of making light of things."

The blossomy man, who had been silent, "But did you hear about the forger?"

"No. Why?"

"He was there on account of a simple desire to make a name for himself."

The man with the stogie meditated. "That reminds me of the burglar," he casually remarked. There was a three-minute stage wait and the man who liked apple jack gave way to curiosity.

"Why?"

"As he said, through nothing but taking advantage of an opening which offered in a large mercantile establishment."

The blossomy man had departed, leaving a wide, far-reaching void.—St. Paul Globe.

Another on Ireland.

Sir Thomas Lipton is himself authority for a story that relates to his experience on the Shamrock when lying in Southampton water. Observing a quartette of bargemen rowing their clumsy craft in perilous proximity to the yacht's delicate sides, he called out, pleasantly: "Hi, my men! Keep away a bit, will you?" One of the bargemen ceased rowing and eyed the captain critically. "Wot do ye call that 'ere thing you're on?" he demanded. "This," replied Sir Thomas, courteously, "is the yacht Shamrock." "Bill," sniffed the barge, turning to his neighbor on the next thwart, "I call 'er the Shamrock." Another barge, in justice to Ireland?—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Some Other Plan Necessary.

"The trusts," exclaimed the excited individual, who, so to speak, was at the oratorical bat, "must be broken up. The trust microbe in the audience slapped the typhoid fever microbe on the back and laughed derisively."

"He isn't up with the latest discoveries in science," it said. "He doesn't know that we can stand a temperature of 312 degrees below zero!"—Chicago Tribune.

Not Wasted.

"Johnny, did you take your cough medicine regularly in school, as I told you?"

"No; Tommy Budds liked it, an' he gimme an apple for it."—Bryar Stories.

DESIGNED AND WRITTEN ESPECIALLY FOR ... THIS PAPER ...

The residence here described will cost $3,000. It contains nine rooms, and is built on a stone foundation.

The design is of an attractive character, and contains both pleasing elevations and well arranged plans. The circular bay window at the side is a very good feature. The underpinning and stone work, where shown, are constructed of field stone, laid up at random. The superstructure, of wood, is covered on the exterior with sheathing paper, and then sided with narrow sided

ing. The exterior is painted a light gray with white trimming.

The roof is covered with shingles and stained a reddish brown.

Dimensions: Front, 27 feet; side, 44 feet, not including rear porch or rear corner bay.

Height of ceilings: Basement, 7 feet; first story, 10 feet; second story, 9 feet 6 inches. The principal characteristic of the first floor is the planning of reception hall, parlor and library so that they can be thrown into practically one room. The reception hall is treated architecturally like a room, the stairway being screened with a portion of spindle work in an artistic manner.

The hall is trimmed with cypress, finished natural. The parlor and library are of good dimensions, and are trimmed with quarter-sawn red oak. The latter contains a closet, book case and a bay window extending out, with paneled seat. The dining-room is trimmed with Georgia pine.

The bay at corner of this room is very cozy. The large pantry and the kitchen are trimmed and wainscoted with yellow pine, and are furnished with all the best modern fixtures complete. The second floor contains four chambers with closets; the bathroom contains modern fixtures. All floors are double, having felt paper between them. All exterior walls are back plastered. The basement is cemented, and the entire house is piped for gas and furnace.

The two front doors have a large, beveled plate glass panel in them. The veranda and balcony floors will have the tongues and grooves well leaded before the floor is laid.

The hardware is of a neat design. All finished floors are of pine. Plastering two-coat work; painting of exterior to have three coats, including the priming. Yellow press brick is used for the chimney showing above the roof. Art glass over the two large windows, as shown on front elevation. All doors to have five panels; swing doors between dining-room and pantry and kitchen and pantry. Rear stairs are of white pine. All closets are fitted with three shelves and drawers and clothes hooks.

All material used throughout this residence is to be the best of its respective kind. The sizes of the rooms are shown on the floor plans. Down spouts, gutters, flashing and final are of galvanized iron. GEO. A. W. KINTZ.

GANG-NEEDLE MACHINES.

One of the Many Varieties of Sewing Machines Made Nowadays and in General Use.

It is a more or less familiar fact that sewing machines are used nowadays for sewing many different materials, as leather, paper, canvas, carpets, rubber. They are used for making buttonholes and sewing on buttons. They are made of many types and in simply hundreds of varieties for special uses. But it may not be known so commonly that there are many sewing machines now made with more than one needle.

The first of these, a two-needle machine, was made in the early eighties, about 15 years ago. It was used by manufacturers of heavy clothing, perhaps first of all by the overall manufacturers, making seams stronger by putting in two rows of stitching. The utility and economy of the two-needle machine soon became apparent, and it came into widespread and diversified use. Whenever two rows of stitching were to be made a two-needle machine was used. A familiar illustration of the work is seen in the two parallel lines of stitching run with perfect exactness around the top of a shoe vamp. Shirt sleeves are stitched into the body of the shirt on a double needle machine, the two rows being made in the same time that it would take to make one. Collars and cuffs were stitched on two-needle machines, as were a great variety of these things, and later there were produced machines with more than two needles, the first of these coming into use within five or six years. There are now made sewing machines with as many as 12 needles.

A 12-needle sewing machine simply has 12 needles where the ordinary sewing machine would have one. Instead of a single spool of thread on the top of the machine there appears there a rack of 12 spools. There are 12 tension disks. The thread from each spool runs through its own tension disk to its own needle. There are below 12 shuttles, one for each needle. When this machine is operated, it makes 12 rows of stitching, just as an ordinary machine would make one. The 12-needle machines are used chiefly in the manufacture of corsets.—X. Y. Sun.

CLIMATE AND ALCOHOL.

Russian Physician Upsets the Time-
Honored Theory of Run's Effects in Cold Countries.

A general belief is that the consumption of alcohol, especially in concentrated form, is greatest in cold climates, and that its effects are less harmful, owing to more rapid oxidation and the more active life of the natives, while the neglect to reduce the amount of alcohol in warmer regions is considered one of the chief causes of disease among Europeans in the tropics. The researches of Dr. Sikorsky, of Kiev, Russia, seem to show that this is far from the truth, says the Army and Navy Journal.

His country is admirably suited for such an investigation, for over a vast extent of latitude from the White sea to the Caucasus the Russian peasant has for generations been testing the effects of his favorite solution of alcohol (vodka) with a vigor and persistence worthy of a martyr of science. According to official statistics, the north Russian drinks from 2.46 to 3.07 liters absolute alcohol per annum, while his brother in the south imbibes no less than 3.5 to 4.8 liters. Yet the deaths from alcoholism show a regular increase northward, being 15 to 22 to 1,000,000 in south, 40 in the center, and 70 to 110 in north Russia. Moreover, there is a marked increase of such deaths in specially cold years.

Dr. Sikorsky concludes that cold greatly increases, even to threefold, the toxicity of alcohol, which, as is well known, so far from increasing bodily temperature, acts as a decided antithermic by paralyzing the peripheral vessels and diminishing organic metabolism.

Quick Way of Multiplying.

Everybody knows that learning the tens in the multiplication table is as easy as "pie," and that the fives are not much harder. But slight as is the mental effort required in multiplying any number by five, it may be lessened still more by discarding the multiplier entirely and substituting a divisor instead. This may sound paradoxical, but by experimenting you will find that dividing by two will bring the same result as multiplying by five, providing you add a cipher to the quotient if the dividend be an even number, or five, if it be odd. For instance, you multiply 2,734 by five, the product is 13,670. What is still easier, divide 2,734 by two, which is done almost instantaneously. Then tack on your cipher and you have 13,670.

Wettest Place in the Earth.

Cherrapunji, in Assam, northeast of Calcutta, has the reputation of being the wettest place in the earth, the average annual rainfall being 493.15 inches, while it has the record of one month in which 147.17 inches fell. This year it seems bound to beat all previous records, 267.84 inches of rain having fallen between January 1 and the middle of June, 5 1/2 months, while 73.79 inches, over six feet of water, fell in a single week.

A New Street Cleaner.

The new street cleaner is a combination of the ordinary cleaner, with its revolving brush, and the water cart. When the vehicle is set in motion the water sprinkles the ground and then the brush sweeps aside the moistened dust and rubbish.

One of Her Kind Enough.

New York boasts of a young woman who rode 500 miles in 58 hours, and asks what other town can match her. No other town, we hope. A young woman is out of place in such feats of endurance, and all such exhibitions should be strongly discouraged.

WISH TO BE ANNEXED.

Merchants of Santo Domingo Are Tired of Their Government.But the Common People Do Not Like Uncle Sam—Tale of Corruption Unparalleled in Modern History.

[Special Correspondence.]

THAT a revolution is at present threatening the prosperity of the Dominican republic would not in itself be a startling bit of information, for revolutions in that part of the world are the rule rather than the exception. What makes the present disturbance of particular interest to Americans is the fact that the merchants and foreign planters, who are the bone and sinew of the republic, are almost unanimous in desiring the United States to either annex or establish a protectorate over the little country.

The Dominican republic, sometimes erroneously called the republic of Santo Domingo, occupies the eastern and larger part of the island of Santo Domingo, or Haiti, in the West Indies. It is broken by several mountain chains, and in the interior there are elevated plains of great fertility and beauty. The majority of the inhabitants (numbering about 550,000) are of mixed Indian, Spanish and negro blood, with some of pure African descent, and comparatively few whites. Spanish is the common and official language, though French and English are spoken in the coast towns. The state religion is Roman Catholicism, but other religious cults are tolerated. Agriculture, cattle raising and timber cutting are almost the only industries, the principal export being sugar, coffee, tobacco, hides and cabinet woods. The entire area of the republic, according to Dominican claims, is 18,045 square miles.

The capital of the country is the city of Santo Domingo, located at the mouth of the Ozama river. It was founded by Bartholomew Columbus in 1496, and is the oldest European city, and was long the most important place in the new world. It was sacked by Sir Francis Drake in 1586, a blow from which it never recovered completely. In 1511 the Spanish government established there the so-called "audience of Santo Domingo," whose jurisdiction included all of Spanish America until 1523. From this high court Cortes derived his first legal authority, as did Gil Gonzalez Davila and other conquerors. Later this "audience" became subordinate to that of Mexico, but it existed as a legal tribunal until the union of Santo Domingo with Haiti. At present writing the population of the city is hardly more than 25,000, thousands of whom are paupers and beggars.

The Dominican republic was formed in 1844, after a revolution by which it was separated from Haiti. From 1862 to 1865 it was held by Spain. In 1869 President Diaz signed with President Grant a treaty of annexation with the United States, which the American senate refused to ratify. The constitution now in force provides for the election, every four years, of a president; and there is a national congress of 22 members, elected by restricted suffrage, although the president is elected by universal suffrage.

From 1865 up to 1882, when Ulysses Heureaux, who was recently assassinated, one revolution succeeded every other; murder was practiced openly, and corruption permeated every branch of the government. In 1865 the Rothschilds made a loan of $3,675,000 to the state, of which only $35,000 reached the Dominican treasury, the balance being divided between the promoters of the deal, the financiers interested in it and the government officials who signed the bonds. Yet, despite this gigantic steal, the country was fairly prosperous when Heureaux was elected president in 1882 and restored peace and order. A man of charming presence, by nature a diplomat and a close observer of things, this dashing Dominican soon became dictator of the republic. His reelection every fourth year was a farce, as he was the whole government. Congress, judges and provincial governors were his creatures, and the constitution and the law were interpreted according to his wishes.

Had he been a truly great man he could have made the Dominican republic respected at home and abroad, but his passion for display and extravagant habits led him to excesses which have brought the little country to bankruptcy and ruin. After he had occupied the presidential chair for six years he owed large sums to every merchant and planter and to such foreign residents as could be persuaded to lend him anything. Many of these obligations were incurred in the name of the government, and when the time for settlement came, not even a Philadelphia lawyer could have separated the national from the private debts.

When pushed beyond the verge of endurance for ready cash, the president sent confidential agents to Europe to negotiate a national loan of $3,500,000. These men did their work so well that financiers in Hamburg, Amsterdam and Brussels not only subscribed the required amount, but in 1890 granted another loan of $4,500,000, of which two-thirds was to be set aside to complete a railroad from Porto Plata to Santiago. To secure payment of the interest on the loan the creditors required the government to make over to them the entire customs receipts, excepting $60,000 gold per month for the budget. The money received on the loans was spent in less than no time, to use a slang phrase, but the railroad remained unfinished and Heureaux was hard up once more. The European financiers declined to increase their Dominican investments, and in this extremely a syndicate of American capitalists came to the rescue of the spendthrift.

Under the direction of Smith M. Weed, Charles B. Wells, Warner Miller, Matthew S. Quay, Stephen B. Elkins, Willard Brown, Calvin S. Brice and other prominent capitalists and politicians the Santo Domingo Improvement company was organized in 1892 for the purpose of assuming the European loans, to make additional loans to the president and to complete the Porto

A Jubilee Convention.

The greatest religious event in October will be the jubilee convention of the Christian Church Missionary Society at Cincinnati, October 12-23. It is expected that 1,000 delegates will go from Kentucky and that the total attendance will be 20,000. In fifty years the church membership has grown from 100,000 members to 1,500,000. The first church was formed in 1804 at Cane Ridge, in Bourbon county, Ky., by Barton W. Stone with members mainly from a Presbyterian church. In 1820 there were 7 churches, now there are 44 colleges and universities, 6,000 ministers, 7,500 Sunday-schools and 10,138 churches. The growth has been marvelous since 1890, the gain having been 60 per cent.

THE annual reunion of the Seventh Kentucky Federal cavalry was held at Cynthiana Wednesday, and was attended by about 1,000 veterans, many ex-Confederates participating. A. T. Forsyth, of this city, was among the old soldiers present.

PERSONS who want engraved cards or invitations of any description are invited to call at THE BOURBON NEWS office and look at the very latest styles in these lines. Prices as low as Cincinnati, Louisville Philadelphia or New York houses.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

The old saying that "a man, who is naked can't give away his shirt," is only another way of saying that you can't give what you haven't got. The man can't give "free medical advice," or any other kind of medical advice who hasn't got a medical education and a certificate to the fact, in the form of a diploma. And in this particular a woman has no more privilege than a man. She can't give medical advice without medical education and medical knowledge.

The offer of free medical advice made by Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has been imitated by so many, who without any medical qualifications claim to give "medical advice" that a word of caution is necessary.

Don't write for medical advice to any one, man or woman, who is not a physician. If they are physicians they will take the title of physicians or doctors so that you may recognize them. If they don't claim that title it is because they dare not, for fear of the law.

Do not forget that there is just as much difference in doctors as in artists. Every little town has its artist who draws and paints. But these "artists" generally paint copies of the works of great artists like Millet. There was only one Millet.

There is only one Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, such as Dr. Pierce presides over. Thousands of women come or write to Dr. Pierce who have found no help at the hands of doctors of lesser skill and narrower experience.

Any sick or ailing woman, suffering from the distressing forms of disease peculiar to women, is invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. Such consultations are absolutely private. Each letter is treated as a sacred confidence, and each answer is sent in a plain envelope, bearing no printing upon it.

In this way offensive questions and repulsive examinations may be avoided. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

WEDNESDAY at the Frankfort street fair the balloonist descended into the Kentucky river and was rescued with great difficulty as the parachute fell on him.

The Kentucky Midland Medical Society will meet in Georgetown next Thursday.

First Lieutenant H. G. Grubbs, of the Sixth infantry, who was killed in a recent engagement in the Philippines, was a native of Kentucky. He was graduated from West Point in the class of 1896, and was a native of Boyle county.

Sacrificed to Blood Poison.

Those who have never had Blood Poison can not know what a desperate condition it can produce. This terrible disease which the doctors are totally unable to cure, is communicated from one generation to another, inflicting its taint upon countless innocent ones.

Some years ago I was inoculated with poison by a nurse who infected my babe with blood taint. The taint on me was unequal to the struggle, and my life was yielded up to the fearful poison. For six long years I suffered untold misery. I was covered with sores and ulcers from head to foot, and no language can express my feelings of weariness from long years. I had the best medical treatment. Several physicians successively treated me, but all to no purpose. The mercury and potash seemed to add fuel to the awful flame which was devouring me. I was advised by friends who had seen wonderful cures made by it, to try S. S. S. We got two bottles, and I felt hope again revive in my breast—hope for health and happiness again. I improved from the start, and a complete and perfect cure was the result. S. S. S. is the only blood remedy which reaches desperate cases.

Of the many blood remedies, S. S. S. is the only one which can reach deep-seated, violent cases. It never fails to cure perfectly and permanently the most desperate cases which are beyond the reach of other remedies.

S.S.S. For The Blood

is PURELY VEGETABLE, and is the only blood remedy guaranteed to contain no mercury, potash, or other mineral.

Autumn Society Events.

For the past fortnight Mrs. Corne Watson and her chief assistant, Miss Kendrick, of Chicago, have been very busy preparing for the Fall display of millinery which will be held to-day and to-morrow. They have prepared a superb millinery spectacle, which embraces hats and bonnets just as beautiful and stylish as can be seen on Fifth avenue in New York, on State street in Chicago, or Fourth street in Cincinnati and Louisville. It is indeed fortunate for the ladies of Bourbon and surrounding counties that they have the very latest ideas in millinery brought to them so promptly, and they certainly appreciate Mrs. Watson's earnest desire to please. The displays to-day and to-morrow will be society events and every lady should attend.

THEATRICAL AND OTHERWISE.

News and Comment of Stage Matters and Other Gossip.

Robert Downing recently produced at Washington a rural play called an Indiana Romance. The play was entirely different from any produced by Downing of late years. The star and the play were well received.

Nat Goodwin's London season will close next week and he will sail immediately for America. He will begin his American tour at the Cincinnati Grand in "The Cowboy and The Lady."

"A BREEZY TIME."

For the last few years, it would seem as if the public has been seeking that class of plays having as their fundamental principle, the creation of merriment.

Working for this idea, the author of "A Breezy Time" has given an amusing and well told story that Fitz and Webster's clever company of comedy players have succeeded in elaborating into an enjoyable entertainment. Merit is shown from the fact that it not only has all the elements of music and fun, but its story is coherent and full of well sustained interest.

The three acts of "A Breezy Time" have been happily impregnated with music, songs, dances and amusing specialty features, all of which are introduced in an easy and perfectly legitimate manner, and the presentation gives a bright and crisp entertainment.

The finale of the last act was arranged by Fitz and Webster in which they introduced a number of "Rag Time" airs, closing the show with a grand cake walk by the entire company.

"A Breezy Time" will be at the opera house to-night.

Don't Miss This Display.

The millinery stores will be the most popular places in Paris to-day and to-morrow, and no lady should fail to pay a visit to Mrs. George Rion's store to see her annual Fall display of trimmed hats. The stock was carefully selected and contains something that will please every lady who calls. Don't miss Mrs. Rion's display to-day and to-morrow.

Masonic Lodge Meeting.

A large delegation of visiting brethren is expected, and a full attendance of the members is requested. Lodge will open at 7:15, and members are requested to be present at that time.

Killed in Texas.

The Antlered Brethren.

Gala Day For Ladies.

Mrs. M. Parker's Fall Millinery displays to-day and to-morrow will be gala days for the ladies of Bourbon and surrounding counties, and those who attend will view an exquisite collection of trimmed hats and bonnets designed by clever women and fashioned by deft fingers. Mrs. Parker's hats are second to none in point of beauty, style and elegance, and will baffle the criticisms of the most exacting critic. The invitation to these displays is general, and of course no lady who comes to Paris will think of missing these gala events.

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centered and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of great durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr. C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them. You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy Imperial spectacles of a reliable, scientific dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

When she married, often she Forcefully asseverated.
On the threshold throne she'd be Sovereign sole, not dominated
By her chosen minister.
Others might be held and harried;
None should dictate unto her
When she married!

When she married—as she did—
Found her throne of love rose-hidden,
And she walked as she was bid.
Never knowing she was bidden,
He could reign enough for two.
And her maiden plans miscarried;
She became the gentle shrew
When she married!

When he wedded, so he said,
He'd none of the bonds that tie men!
She, his choice, would know who led.
Ere they'd quit the shrine of hymen,
She might make and mend his things;
See him fed and softly bedded;
He would hold the horse-purse strings
When he wedded!

When he wedded he would check
Butchers' bills and bakers';
And would find him no soft geek
Milliners and maids-in-makes!
He would manage when and well,
Marriage he in nowise dented;
But the records do not tell
When he wedded!

CHAPTER XIX.
EXIT THE ANCIENT BRICO.

I had gained my point without waste of words or time, but it was to be my way or not at all. My lady was in dire peril. Against this could I for a moment weigh any thought of myself? What cared I whether France, Spain, or the Borgias ruled in Italy? What mattered it to me whether one crafty statesman held the reins of power, or another outdid him in craft and fled away his bone? My lady was in danger, and my honor, my life, and the Most Christian, the Most Catholic, and Most Holy weaves might tear each other's throats out before I would move a finger, take one step, until she was free. If I had to pull down Bagnoli's hold with my own hands, I would free her. If a hair of her head was injured I should take such vengeance as man never heard of, and then—my foot caught in the carpeting of the passage, I tripped up and fell heavily, the shock sending stars before my eyes.

"Too much haste, cavalier," and a hand helped me to rise. As I gained my feet I saw Machiavelli beside me.

"I followed you at once," he said, "but you went so fast I had missed you but for that lucky trip. A word more—if you free her, take her to the convent of St. Jerome, two miles northwest of Magliana—the abbess will do the rest. I will see to that."

"Very well. God grant I succeed!"

"Amen to that," and Machiavelli took my hand. "Adieu, cavalier, once again, I must go back to his eminence, we have a point or two to discuss yet, but no more Falernian. Corpo di Dio! I grow cold when I think of our escape."

"Good-by, your excellency," and we parted.

I went on with a little more care, and, being a trifle cooled by my fall, was able to think better. By the time I reached my apartments I had decided on my route. I should leave by the Porta del Popolo, keep on the right bank of the river as far as Borghetto, there cross the Tiber, and on to Perugia in a straight line by Narni and Todi. It was close on three and thirty leagues; but I did not mean to spare horse-flesh. As I reached the entrance which led to my rooms, I found Jacopo and my men ready, and Castor welcomed a glad welcome, patting at the air with his foot on his breast.

"St. Armande and the abbe, already mounted and attended by a couple of men, were a little to the right."

"I will not keep you a moment, cavalier," I called out as I passed him, and, running up the stairs to my room, I began to dress rapidly. Jacopo attended me, and as he handed me my sword, pointed to the open window.

"A fair night for a long ride, excellency!"

"Yes, the moon stands well—my cloak—quick," and we descended the stairs.

"All ready, Jacopo?"

"Your excellency."

"Steady, Castor," and I swung into the saddle.

There was the jingle of bit chains, the clank of steel saddles, the ring of iron-shod hoofs on the pavement, and with St. Armande by my side and my troop behind me, I left the Palazzo Cornello.

To avoid risk of stoppage I did not go down by the Alessandria to the Ponte di San Angelo, but determined to cross at the Ripetta. Therefore, crossing the Borgo di San Angelo, we went northwards by the V. d. Tre Papazzi, up the Via Cancellieri, and then, turning to the right, rode up the Via Crescenzo. To our right, as we rode, the moon hung over San Angelo and the dark outlines of the gloomy stronghold loomed like a vast shadow of evil above us. In front of us lay the Tiber, and the long line of fires of the charcoal-burners. The latter over-arched a blue cloud of smoke, into which the torrid flames leaped and danced. At the bridge we were stopped by the guard, but the safe-conduct set us free, and we crossed at a slow pace. Above the hollow leat of the horses' hoofs I heard the waters churning around the piers, and, looking over the side, saw the gray river as it hummed past below me, flecked with white foam-tipped waves, chasing each other in lines of light across its surface, or, as they broke, catching the moon rays, and dying in a hundred colors with an angry hiss.

Passing through the ruined Porta del Popolo, where the breaches made by Charles' cannon were still unimpaired, we took the Flaminian Way, and galloped down the road almost in darkness, galloping down the shadows thrown by the high walls on each side of us. We recrossed the Tiber at the Ponte Malle, and, still keeping the Via Flaminia, turned our horses' heads in the direction of Castel Nuovo.

Not the best horse in the world could keep up the pace we were going for long, and I was old enough soldier to know that our speed must be regulated by the slowest beast if we wanted to reach in full strength, so I slackened rein to a walk and gave the animals a rest.

Excepting once, when Jacopo rode off to make his duty to the Fountain of Trevi, I had not exchanged a word with St. Armande, indeed I was in no mind to talk; but he broke the silence with a question.

"Do we ride all night, cavalier?"

"We have many leagues to go, St. Armande."

"Ciel!" he muttered under his breath, and I heard the abbe as he leaned forward whisper: "Courage! would you give way now? Courage!"

Clearly there was a mystery here to which I had no clew, and it troubled me. I glanced at St. Armande, and through the moonlight saw the white of his cheek, showing all the paler for the black patch he wore transversely across it; but looking at him did not explain matters.

"What the devil does this mean?" I said half aloud to myself.

"Did you speak?"

"Merely something to myself, chevalier. Diavolo! But this is a dull ride."

"Do you think so?" and his tone softened suddenly.

I made no reply, but stirred up Castor, and we jogged along. I left the mystery to take care of itself, and mapped out a line of action. I would take only two men with me into Perugia, and send the rest with St. Armande to the convent of St. Jerome to await the result of my attempt to free Angiola. It sounded like fooliness to give St. Armande the control of the stronger party, especially if he meant treachery; but this I was persuaded he did not. On the other hand, a following of six troopers was a trifle too many to pay a peaceful visit to Bagnoli, and might arouse suspicion, while they were too few to attempt open force. In short, if I could not do what I wanted with two men, I would not be able to effect it with six or a dozen, and made up my mind to split our party, either after crossing the Paglia, or beyond at San Fortunato.

In this manner, sometimes galloping, sometimes trotting, and at other times walking our horses to give them a rest, we reached Castel Nuovo, but did not enter the town, skirting it by our right, although one of the troopers suggested our going westwards by Campagnano, a useless detour as it seemed to me. We passed the little town exactly at midnight, and the chime of bells striking the hour fell pleasantly on our ears. A short way beyond we found the road so cut into ruts and fissures that it was not possible to go at any other than a snail's pace, so that within the next two hours we barely covered as many leagues. The moon was now on the wane, the road became worse, and one or two of the horses showed signs of fatigue. Jacopo rode up beside me.

"By your leave, excellency! We have the road by Soratte to cross soon, and in the coming darkness may possibly lose our way. I would suggest, therefore, that we halt here until dawn. It will rest the horses, and with the light we could press on."

"Very well. Hark! Is not that the sound of water?"

"Yes, your worship."

"Then we will stop there."

A few yards beyond we came to a ruined temple, near which a fountain was bubbling. Here I gave the order to halt, and in less time than I take to write this the troopers had sprung to earth, the saddles and bridles were loosened, and all the preparations for a two hours' halt begun.

I shared a little wine with St. Armande and the abbe, and the former, rolling himself up in his cloak, leaned his back against a fallen pillar, and seemed to drop off at once into sleep.

The abbe followed his example, but my mind was too impatient for rest, and I walked up and down, watching the ending of the moon, until it finally sank out of sight, and darkness fell upon us.

Dark as it was around me, my mind was in a still greater darkness, for I was unable to think of any plan by which I could gain access to Angiola, after reaching Perugia. Time, too, was short; but that did not matter, for I was prepared to let the affair of the duels slide, rather than lose any chance of rescuing her.

A straw yet remained. Luck might be on my side, and with luck and a strong heart one might do anything. There was nothing for it but to content myself for the present with this. Until I reached Perugia I could develop no plan. So I paced up and down with an unsettled mind, and finally, settling myself on a stone, awaited the morning, alternately nodding and awakening with a start.

At last! The east began to whiten, and, getting up stiffly, I touched Jacopo with the end of my sword. He jumped with an exclamation, and, recognizing me, began to apologize. This I cut short, and bade him arouse the men.

"This instant, your worship, Cospetto! To think I should have over-slept myself! Ho, sluggards! Buffaloes! Awake! Think you that you are going to stare here all night?" and he began to stir the men up. They rose willingly enough, with tremendous yawning and stretching of arms, and we were soon on the march again, though the increasing daylight.

The coming day seemed to warm the hearts of the men, and one of them broke into song, the chorus being taken up by the others, as we jogged along. When this had lasted some little time, I gave Castor's reins a shake, and off we went at a smart gallop.

Shortly after passing San Onofre the road led along the side of Soratte, and the morning being young, besides very bright and clear, we had a glorious view. To the left lay Civita Castellana, the walls of the new citadel standing high above the town, which lay in the middle of a network of deep ravines; to the right and behind us the Sabine Hills extended in long, airy lines, and the wooded heights of Pallachio and San Gennaro, where, close to Palombara, was an old castle of our house, rose to the south-east. Above us was the monastery of St. Silvestro, and Soratte itself reached towards where Borghetto stood, on a bend of the Tiber, in a series of descending peaks. Cool puffs of air caressed us, and freshened our horses as well as our hearts, and it was a cheery party that finally reached the Ponte Felice, and entered the town. Here our safe-conduct again stood us in good stead. Indeed, we had difficulty in getting away, for the Captain Lippi, who held Borghetto for the Borgia, wished to press his hospitality on us for a few days; but on my eventually taking him aside, and whispering to him that I was bound on a confidential mission, he gave in, but with some little reluctance. He, however, invited us to share his table at dinner. I accepted, but Sir Armande, who was looking very weary, declined, and dined quietly with the abbe at the "Silver Eel" where I quartered my men.

Lippi was an old soldier risen from the ranks, with a head more full of drill than suspicion; but in order to remove any such suspicion that might be growing there I accepted at dinner that I begged the favor of his accompanying me for a league or so on my way, after we had dined. To this he agreed with alacrity, and I was subsequently sorry for my pains, for the old bore did not quit me until we had all but reached the Nera, and saw the campanile of St. Juvenalis rising above Narni. We did this portion of the journey at a rapid pace, as I wanted, if possible, to shake off the captain, but, mounted on an Apulian, he stuck to me like a burr, dining into my ears his opinion as to how the crossbow was a weapon as superior to the arquebus as the mangonel was above the catapult of the new cannon. At length he wished us to depart, and the day's journey, putting on fresh speed as we galloped through the oaks that studded the valley of the Nera. The river here was hemmed into a narrow ravine, and, crossing by an ancient bridge of three spans, supposed to have been built by the Romans, we climbed up the steep ascent that led to Narni, and there found food and lodging for both man and beast, at an albergo, the name of which, somehow, I have forgotten. St. Armande was quite worn out, and I saw he was unfit for any long strain. We supped together, and he retired almost at once. After supper I had a detailed examination of the horses, and found that one of them had a sore back. The trooper who owned him vowed he would not part with him, so I had to dismiss the man, which I did. This reduced my fighting strength to six men, including Jacopo. I did not include St. Armande and his followers in estimating this, putting them down to so much incumbrance, of which I would soon take care to be rid. I was anxious, however, to hurry on, and so altered my original plans a little, and in the morning, after we had gone about a league, I turned to St. Armande, and said:

"Chevalier, it is necessary for me to press on with all speed. I want you, therefore, to do me a favor."

"Anything you like, cavalier; but we do not part, do we?"

"It is this. I am going on at once; I want you to take four of my troopers, and with your own following make for the convent of St. Jerome. It lies a little beyond Magliana. Your arrival will be expected. If not, say you are awaiting me. Await me for a week. If I do not come then, go back to Rome, and tell the cardinal what you have done."

"But I thought I was to go with you and share your adventure?"

"I give you my word of honor, St. Armande, that you will share in the adventure for which I agreed you should come—share up to the elbows—but you will spoil everything if you do not do what I say."

"There is no danger to you?"

"No more than there is to you; in one word, St. Armande, do you agree or not?"

"Very well."

"Then there is no time to lose. Jacopo!"

"Excellent!"

"Pick out a man, and he, you, the lackey and myself, will go on ahead. The rest can follow. I have given all other orders to the signor, St. Armande."

"There is Bando Nere, your worship."

"I am ready, cavalier," and a tall, thin, gray-mustached trooper saluted as he spoke. He looked the man I wanted. My lackey was a stout horseman, and at a pinch might hold a sword as well as he held my valise. So, shaking hands with St. Armande, I put spurs to Castor, and we dashed off. Turning the corner of a belt of forest land, I looked back and waved my hand in further adieu to the cavalier. I caught the flutter of the white handkerchief the young dandy carried, as he loosed it to the air in reply to my salute, and the next moment the trees hid them from view.

We rode hard now, Castor going almost as freely as when we started. Indeed, I would have far outpaced the others, if I did not let him feel the bit once, and the noble beast, as if knowing his duty, required no further warning not to outstrip his companions.

Jacopo attended to the task as if he loved it.

Going as we were now Perugia was but a few hours away; but the pace was too great to last long, and from Todi to Perugia there were nine leagues and a trifle over of an ascending road. Castor might do it, the others I was sure would not. In order, therefore, to rest the horses, as well as to avoid question, I resolved that we should dine at Rosaro, and after an hour or so of rest press forwards, passing by Todi, and traveling all night, so as to reach Perugia in the morning. If we went faster, we would only reach at night, and so late as to find entrance into the town impossible.

We clustered past the villages of San Gennaro and Castel Tordinone, and about noon drew up our now somewhat blown beasts at the gates of the "Man-at-Arms," the only inn in the village.

It was a poor place I saw at a glance, and, as we pulled up, a crowd of yelps in holiday attire gathered around us. The inn seemed full, too, for the yard swarmed with people, and a half-score heads of contadini were at each window, staring at us open-eyed.

As I took this in, the landlord came running out, cap in hand and full of apologies.

"Ohime! But my house is full to the galleys, signore, and it is nothing I can do for you to-day. To-morrow is the feast of St. Mary of the Consolation, and all the country is going to Todi."

"I do not want to stay. We merely halt here to bait our horses and to dine. Can you manage that?"

"If that is all, excellency, yes, oh, yes. The beasts, they can rest anywhere, and there is a polenta and room for your excellency's followers; but for yourself, signore," and he shook his head mournfully.

"What is the difficulty?" And I dismounted, my men following suit.

"But this, signore. There is but one room in the house you could use, and that is occupied by two gentlemen of the army. Violent men, signore, who will not allow anyone to share it. Lasso me! But not a paul have they paid me as yet!"

"Give them my compliments, and say that the Cavalier Donati begs to be allowed a corner of their table for his dinner."

"Alas, signore! It is useless. They have been here two days."

"Then if it is time they made room for other travelers. Give my message, landlord, and say I am following."

Mine host trotted off with considerable misgivings expressed in his face, and followed by my lackey, bearing my valise, I went after him at a slower pace.

When I reached the room, which could hardly be missed, seeing it was the only one in the house that had any pretense of appearance, I found the door open, and heard a half-drunken voice shouting:

"Begone, dog! Blood of a king! But are two gentlemen to be disturbed because a signore with a long name wants to dine? Skull of St. Jerome! Did you ever hear the like of this? Cospetto! Tell him to go hang, or I'll spit him like a lark."

I heard enough to recognize the voice, and, turning to the lackey, said:

"Send Jacopo here at once with a stout cudgel—run."

The man went off on the double, and I remained without the door listening with amusement to the ancient Brico's bluster; for it was he, and he was having all the talk, his companion, whoever he was, now and then giving a grunt of assent.

"Mitre and cow! Hell and sulphur! Will you begone, fool, or shall I slit your windpipe?" and I heard him beat the table with his fist. "Out, rascal!" he roared, "and bring in another skin of chianti!"

Out came the wretched innkeeper, and, seeing me at the door, began to urge me to go; but at this moment Jacopo came running up with a stout stick in his hand, and, pushing the landlord on one side, I stepped into the room, followed by Jacopo.

Brico's friend, who was quite drunk as it seemed, had fallen asleep whilst he was talking, and lay with his head between his arms, half on the table, half on his chair. The ancient was seated with an empty skin before him, and rose in wrath as I entered.

"What the—," he began in a wine-blown voice, and then his face paled a little as he saw me.

"I did not waste words. 'Cudgel me this fellow out, Jacopo,' I said, and Jacopo attended to the task as if he loved it. The ancient attempted to draw his sword, but it was useless, and a minute or two later he was flung out into the courtyard, beaten to a jelly and howling for mercy. He lay where he was flung, too bruised to move.

His friend slept through it all; but as my lackey lifted up his head in an attempt to eject him, I recognized Piero Luigi, and felt that some more stringent action than I had taken with Brice should be adopted here.

"This man is a thief," I said to the land-lord, "and his friend little better."

"Then to the stocks they go; and now," almost screamed the host, "not a paul have they paid me, signore. I swear this, the bandits. Hi! Giuseppe! Giovanni!"

A couple of stout knaves came running in, and the innkeeper, trembling with anger and fear combined, yelled out:

"Bind this brigand and his companion securely. Keep them in the stables, and to-morrow we will hale them before the podesta."

I enjoyed my dinner comfortably, and on going out to see after the horses was met by Bando Nere, who took me aside to where, in a corner of the stables, two men were lying seemingly bound. One was Luigi, still happily drunk. The other was the ancient. Since he had been taken away, he had been beaten and bound, and was feeling the full effect of the cudgel and the ropes. He was growling terribly, and, being sorry for the wretch, I was about to interpose for him with the landlord, when Jacopo interposed with a whispered:

"Let the scolded snake lie, signore; he knows too much."

I let wisdom take its course, and left the ancient to his sorrows.

STONE KINGS.

Spanish Sovereigns Are Petrified in Their Coffins by a Peculiar Process.

The kings of Spain are petrified in their coffins. All the Spanish sovereigns for many years have been buried in an octagonal chamber of the Escorial at Madrid.

But previous to the final sepulture each corpse has to be exposed, naked save for a single sheet, renewed from time to time, on a marble slab in the podridero or rotting vat. It is said that the very air of this charnel house possesses petrifying properties. These properties are enhanced, or possibly produced, by the action of drugs, which slowly trickle down upon the corpse from faucets above. Properly constituted authorities examine the corpse from time to time to see that the work of fossilization is progressing satisfactorily and to announce when it is completed.

Then the ceremony of the translation of the relics is observed with magnificent pomp. It is averred that bodies so petrified do not always retain their stony consistence. It is whispered that many of the sarcophagi contain only crumbled dust. But it is certain that two of the nightiest dwellers in this pantheon are as hard and firm as when they were first put into their last resting place. These are Charles V. (the first of Spain) and his son, Philip II. Charles V. died in 1558, and at the completion of the Pantheon his body was transferred thither and found to be unchanged. The sarcophagus was opened by Charles III. to gratify the curiosity of Beckford, the eccentric author of "Vathek," and again in 1869 by the ministers of the revolution. On the latter occasion a drawing was made of it by a Spanish artist, Martin Roco. It confirms in every point the traditional description of the emperor—"broad in the shoulders, deep in the chest, very muscular in the arms and legs, the forehead broad, the nose crooked and aquiline and the under jaw protruding" so far beyond the other that the teeth could not meet."—N. Y. Herald.

The Cook's Feelings Were Hurt.

A first-rate chef was in the employment of Lord Seaford, who, not being able to afford to keep the man, prevailed on the duke of Wellington to engage him. Shortly after entering the duke's service the chef returned to his former master and begged him, with tears in his eyes, to take him back at reduced wages or none at all. Lord Seaford asked: "Has the duke been finding fault?" "Oh, no—he is the kindest and most liberal of masters; but I serve him a dinner that would have made Ude or Francatelli burst with envy and he says nothing! I go out and leave him to dine on a dinner badly dressed by my cook maid and he says nothing. Dat hurt my feelings, my lord!"—Cornhill Magazine.

A Phonetic Point.

A young lawyer was one day making a plea before Lord Russell. It was late in the afternoon, the hour for adjournment was fast approaching, and the young barrister, anxious to finish before closing time, was hurrying along as best he could. Suddenly he spoke of 2 Q. B. D. Lord Russell interrupted him sharply. "You forget yourself, sir," he said, sternly. "You forget yourself. That is no way to address this court." The tyro was profuse in apologies, and explained that he only meant to refer to 2 queen's bench division of the law reports. But the chief justice refused to be appeased. "Why!" he cried. "I might as well say to you, U. B. D."—Boston Herald.

"Peruna is an excellent tonic. I have used it sufficiently to say that I believe it to be all that you claim for it.—S. D. McEnery, New Orleans, Louisiana."

United States Senator Sullivan.

"I desire to say I have been taking Peruna for some time for catarrh, and have found it an excellent medicine, giving me more relief than anything I have ever taken.—W. V. Sullivan, Oxford, Miss."

United States Senator Roach.

"Persuaded by a friend I have used Peruna as a tonic, and am glad to testify that it has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite. HORSE-STALL FLOOR.

Sensible Method of Construction Which Prevents Animals from Staining Their Coats.

Where mares are kept a tight floor in the stall is not especially inconvenient, but with horses the case is otherwise. For them such a floor as is shown in the accompanying illustration is best suited for keeping their coats from becoming stained. The stable floor be-

The pieces of which the stall floor is made may be five inches wide, laid one-half inch apart. They are shown farther apart than this in the cut in order to make the matter plain. MILLET FOR SOILING.

A Crop Furnishing Valuable Food for Dairy Cattle, Young Stock, Sheep and Poultry.

Millet, says a bulletin of the agricultural department just published, is fed principally as a hay and soiling crop. The forage ranks well with that of other grasses in the nutritive content, and its palatability is about that of the average for the coarser sorts. For digestibility, millet forage compares favorably with that from other coarse grasses.

Already widely grown as a hay crop, millets deserve more general use for soiling. They are particularly valuable for feeding to dairy cattle, young stock and sheep. There are many sections of the country where this crop can be made to supplement the pastures in such a way as to allow a material increase in the number of stock that can be kept on the farm.

On account of the heavy yield of forage and the good quality of the product, millets are excellent grasses for use in the silo. Frequently a good crop of millet can be raised under conditions which would not admit of growing corn for ensilage, and in such instances it becomes of especial value. One of the best methods of preserving this crop is by the use of the silo. Those who have tried this method have obtained excellent results. A fine quality of ensilage may be made by using barnyard millet and a leguminous crop like soy beans or clover. The seed of the foxtail millets is widely used as food for fowls and birds, but is seldom fed to stock. It has, however, been used in feeding young stock, such as calves, with a fair degree of success. The seed is excellent food for laying hens.—Farmers' Voice.

SORE MOUTH IN PIGS.

A Dangerous Disease Unless Radical Steps Are Taken When It Makes Its Appearance.

Canker, or nursing sore mouth, is a troublesome disease, and if not promptly attended to proves fatal, says the Swine Journal. It may, and we think it usually does, arise from impurity in the milk of the sow or from poison on her teats and udder obtained by running in tall, wet grass or poison vines. The first symptoms are lumps on the sow's udder, and sometimes sores; next will be noticed blisters on the lip, tongue and mouth of the pig; the tongue and lips become swollen, and the roof and sides of the mouth inflamed and covered with deep red or white blisters. Treatment: Catch the pig and swab his mouth out thoroughly with a solution of carbolic acid and water sufficiently strong to make the flesh upon the arm tingle. Apply it with a rag, or a small piece of sponge tied on a stick. A strong sage tea applied in the same way is good, and in addition take powder sulphur, put it into a large straw, hold the pig's mouth open and blow the dry sulphur in. Apply these remedies frequently and bathe the sow's teats and udder with a weak solution of carbolic acid. Keep litters that have it away from other pigs. Care, close attention and the frequent application of the above remedies will rarely fail to cure if taken in time. The sow should be fed sulphur in her strops.

How to Destroy Weeds.

Annuals and biennials cannot survive long if not allowed to go to seed. But it must be remembered that some have the sly trait of growing low, when repeatedly cut to the roots, and still maturing seed. This is notably the case with that interesting and beautiful, yet bothersome plant, the wild carrot. Yet close and persistent cutting will finally win the day. Burdock blossoms the second year, and if cut down just when coming into bloom, it is finished. Moving Canada thistles when in bloom is one of the easiest and best ways of subduing them.—Bessie L. Putnam, in Agricultural Epitomist.

GOOD CROP OF WHEAT.

Some Things That Cannot Be Neglected If Profitable Results Are Expected.

One essential in growing a good crop of wheat is to have the soil prepared in good tilth. One advantage in plowing early is that a better opportunity is offered of getting the soil into a proper condition for the seed. The under soil should be fairly well packed, and the surface, to the depth of four or five inches, prepared in fine tilth.

The disc and smoothing harrows are good implements to use in preparing the seed-bed.

When conditions will admit, reasonably early seeding is best. But there is no advantage in sowing the seed until the soil is in a good tilth, and unless there is sufficient moisture in the soil to induce a good germination of the seed. Of course, wheat as well as many other kinds of grain will lie in the ground when the soil is dry without germinating, and yet when rains come to moisten up the ground the seed will germinate. But there is risk of loss, and lying in the ground weakens to some extent the vitality of the seed.

It is best, therefore, to defer the seeding until there is sufficient moisture. Another item that may make it desirable to defer the seeding is the risk of injury from Hessian fly. Many good farmers consider that if the seeding can be put off until there is one good frost the risk of injury from fly is greatly lessened.

Another item in making a good crop is to use good seed. For nearly all crops seed should not only possess sufficient vitality to germinate readily under seasonably favorable conditions, but to send forth a vigorous, thrifty plant.

Seed should be carefully selected, and only the best be used. In sowing care should be taken to distribute the seed as evenly as possible over the surface. One advantage in using a drill is that the seed is not only distributed more evenly, but is covered at a more uniform depth.

Because wheat is low in price is the strongest reason why all reasonable care should be taken to secure a good yield. A good yield may return a small profit, even at a low price, while a light yield and low prices mean a positive loss.

The quantity of seed depends somewhat upon the time of sowing, the quality of the seed and the condition of the soil at the time of seeding. If sown in good season with the soil prepared in good tilth, five pecks to the acre will be plenty. This quantity should be increased as the quality of the seed covers with late sowing and poor conditions of the soil. So with late sowing and unfavorable conditions seven pecks to the acre will not be too much.—St. Louis Republic.

KEEPING WATER PURE.

How to Keep Surface Water and Other Deleterious Substances Out of the Farm Well.

Where wells are dug on sloping ground there is always liability that surface water may find its way into the well and carry in deleterious matter. In such cases it is wise to leave the soil removed from the well when it is being dug in the form of a mound about the top, as suggested in the cut, and, to make matters still safer, to lay a tile drain around the upper side to an outlet on the lower side, laying the tile all the way about the proposed opening, before digging is begun. This will keep the well absolutely free from surface water, which, as suggested, is, in many cases, a positive source of danger.—Orange Judd Farmer.

THE HUNTING SEASON.

Hints for Farmers Who Know How to Use a Gun and Like Shooting in the Field.

The reliable rules for shooting flying birds are as follows: Hold a rifle low for a bird apparently flying straight away from the gun; hold just above a bird rapidly rising without sidemotion; hold the same for a bird going straight away and close to the ground; hold above the head of birds rising and going to right and left; hold ahead of birds going straight to right and left; hold ahead and below birds going to right and left and lowering; hold dead on an incoherent and give it to him quickly; for every yard the closer the smaller the spread of shot; hold ahead of birds passing above you. Last, but not least, never check the even swing of the gun in a quartering shot.

At a goose or duck passing overhead I prefer to truly cover the mark, then advance the gun till only the tip of the bird's bill is visible, or, when rather high, till the muzzle leads its object by the proper distance, and then instantly pull the trigger. When the gun has to lead the bird in this position, no hesitancy should be indulged in after the muzzle has passed ahead of the bill, for the shooter cannot then see his game, and any sudden change of flight may prove disastrous. This is a shot at which most men fail by shooting behind.—Ed. W. Sandys, in Outing.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If there is one thing on which the housewife prides herself, it is that of having her laundering done nicely, so that the wearing apparel may be the admiration of all. The washing is a small matter, any one almost can do that, but to have the linens present that flexible and glossy appearance after being ironed requires a fine quality of starch.

Ask your grocer for a coupon book which will enable you to get the first two packages of this new starch—"Red Cross" trade mark brand, also two of the children's Shakespeare pictures painted in twelve beautiful colors as natural as life, or the Twentieth Century Girl Calendar, all absolutely free. This is one of the grandest offers ever made to introduce "Red Cross" laundry starch, J. C. Hubinger's latest invention.

AN EVENING CALL.

Brown Found Perkins Beating His Wife and Told Mrs. Brown All About It.

"I called on Perkins last evening," remarked Mr. Brown.

"Did you have a pleasant time?" inquired Mrs. Brown.

"Very," Perkins was beating his wife when I came in."

"What?"

"I say Perkins was beating his wife, but of course he stopped when I came in."

"Well, I should hope so."

"I begged him to go right on, but he said some other time would do just as well."

"You begged him to go on?"

"Why, yes. I didn't want to stop the fun, you know."

"Do you mean to say you could have looked calmly on while he beat his wife?"

"Certainly. Why not?"

"I thought you had at least a spark of manhood left. I suppose you will be beating me next."

"Yes, I think I could if you would play erubage with me."

"Play erubage?"

"Yes. That is what Perkins and his wife were doing."

"You horrid thing!"—San Francisco Examiner.

A Texas Judge.

In one of the remote counties of the Panhandle of Texas two lawyers were trying a case before a justice of the peace. It was 60 miles as the crow flies to the nearest law book, and the attorneys differed, of course, as to the law upon the main issue in the case. They were trying the case without the intervention of a jury, and his honor, who conducted a gambling house in connection with his hotel, saloon and livery stable, was in doubt as to what his decision ought to be. Finally Miller, the plaintiff's counsel, offered to bet Hoover, the defendant's attorney, $10 that he was right. Hoover did not happen to have that much of the circulating medium concealed about his person, and was naturally at a loss how to parry this forcible argument. The court waited a few moments on Hoover, and finally said: "Well, Mr. Hoover, the court has waited long enough. Miller's proposition seems to be a fair one, and, since you don't put up, I will decide this case in favor of the plaintiff."

Shopping by Mail.

The John M. Smyth Co. of Chicago are devoting a great deal of attention to developing trade throughout the West and South by mail. The concern is one of the largest in the City of Chicago, and has been well and favorably known throughout that city and the North and West for many years. They are now ready to mail to any ready of this paper on receipt of 10c, to partly pay postage or expressage and as evidence of good faith, their mammoth catalogue, which contains illustrated descriptions and prices of every conceivable article and necessity needed in the home or on the farm. The ten cents paid for the mailing of the catalogue is allowed on the first purchase amounting to $1.00 or above. Everyone sending for the catalogue will also receive their monthly grocery price list free every month. People living outside of large cities should send for the John M. Smyth Co. catalogue and compare prices quoted in this catalogue for all articles of home consumption, hardware, dry goods, grocery, notions, clothing, etc., with prices which they are paying. Readers who send to John M. Smyth Co., 150 to 166 W. Madison St., Chicago, for their catalogue should not fail to mention this paper.

Pat's Guess.

Two park laborers sat on a curbstone opposite the Museum of Art and Science in New York, eating lunch out of their pails. "This is fine building," said one of them, "wouldn't you think they'd put up that solid a structure just to keep dead bugs and other creatures in?" "Indade, no," replied the other, "but are them big letters out the stone above the windows the names ay?" "I dono," said the first speaker. He felt to spelling out the words, and presently a ray of intelligence succeeded the puzzled expression on his face. "Sure, I hav it," he said. "Them is the names ay the contractors." Patrick made a good guess, for the names given in the stone were Assyria, Sodom, Paphos, Herodotus, Socrates, Thucydides and Demosthenes.—San Francisco Wave.

Our Own Volcano.

"When I was on the Pacific coast," remarked the new boarder, "I noticed several United States army boxes packed with sarsaparilla. Do you think they could have large mercantile establishments?"

"No," responded the man in black suspenders, "they were probably shipped to Hawaii."

"Hawaii?"

"Yes, you know there is a little eruption there."—Chicago Evening News.

THE very word "operation" strikes terror to a woman's soul.

Nearly always these operations become necessary through neglect.

If the menses are very painful, or too frequent and excessive, get the right advice at once and stop taking chances. It will cost you nothing for advice if you write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for it, and if you let the trouble run along it will surely cost you a great deal of pain and may mean an operation.

MISS SARAH J. GRAHAM, Sheridanville, Pa., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I had suffered for several years with female troubles and doctored until I was discouraged. I felt wretched and tired of living. I had disease of kidneys, bladder trouble, dropsy and bloating, had womb trouble and a large tumor had formed; in fact all my organs were out of fix.

"Seeing a woman's letter praising your remedies, I wrote to her and she begged of me to try it, telling me all that it had done for her. I bought six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now cannot express my gratitude to you. The tumor began to come away in pieces and I got better all the time. I believe now that I am entirely cured.

"My doctors could not believe it at first, as they all had told me that my case was a hopeless one, and no human power could do me any good. They were astounded. If I can say anything that can help other women, I shall be glad to."

It is not safe to wait until the last moment. Head off trouble by prompt attention to it. Don't be satisfied without Mrs. Pinkham's advice.
